WEDNESDAY MORNING, FEB. 3.

Our William the Third. William the Silent was one of the most remarkable sovereigns England ever had. He was silent in peace and silent in war, but he was a man of deeds elect he repulses all demonstrations whereat he would naturally be brough; consplictorily before the public. It is certainly something to be a recognized lion in this day and age of the world and at the same time to refuse to be lionized. There are thousands who are waiting to form around the silent man and who long for an opportunity to do so. But instinctively he understands the sitution. He knows just how to value the incense of the crowd that is always ready to huzzi for the man of the hour, whoever he may be. We are glast to see that he has thrown a damper on the Junaguration ball, and also that he has declined any sort of ovation prompted in honor of his example to the whole country inestinated services by having as little as possible to do with any such performances Whatever may be his own private views and tastes it is wholesome for society at large, and Washington society in particular, that the weight of his example should be against the example should be against the example of the country.

General Grant and his Cabinet. General Grant's entire ability to keep a secret hereafter will be unquestioned. It is reported that at a recent party at his residence a venturesome woman selected a favorable moment to ask him who he intended to place in his Cabinet. The General was surrounded by a although not ungallant, had a tinge of stubbornness in it. Said he, "my wile has asked me that same question, but I haven't told her yet." There can be no doubt that hereafter the women of America and accomplished. circle of the curious sex. His answer

The Cincinnati Gazette recently published an article in which the question was asked. "Does the wife bear her mother of a large family bears no small the following further extract from the share of the burden; which, however, is seldom taken into account by any one but herself. And it she, as most women do, perform the other duties of with even ten years ago; and what do that woman's work is by no means the play many would make believe. It may be very gratifying to the laborer, who works all day in the broiling sun, to say that his wife who is in the shade working over a hot cooking-stove—with perhaps a fretful babe in one arm, as hundreds, thousands of women do year after year—that she has an easy time of it, but, if his labor were protracted into and even through the night as is common with hers, he would look seriously about for relief. Pity the man of business, if you will, whose brain is racked and whose feet are tired with the toil and turnoil of the day. Pity the laboring man who gets up and with the toil and turmoil of the day. Pity the laboring man who gets up and eats the breaktast his wife has prepared while he was yet in bed, who works hard until six o'clock, then lolls around and smokes during the evening and retires at will to a quiet night's rest. But rather pity the poor wife who, when the husband and the fretful babe are asieep, robs her system of its much needed rest to do the work it was not possible to accomplish during the day. Pity to the poor man who is "crushed to earth" by the necessity of providing for his large and increasing family: than he got in Paris. All this gives us for his large and increasing family; than he got in l'aris. All this gives us but have you no words of comfort for her who is an invalid for his sake, ment. We have made more true prothe demands upon whose system are gress in grape culture, discovering new the demands upon whose system are far in excess of its strength, and whose labor, however severe and unceasing, has the lamentable disadvantage of not being lucrative, and who mean while is constantly depressed with the reflection that she and her helpless children constitute her husband's crushing burden? Can ye not, oh, wise legislators, devise some relief? Will you not, by securing to her that which she may inherit or. to her that which she may inherit or acquire before marriage give her an in-centive for procuring something for her own support instead of having to look beggarly or wanton dependence! It is believed that social laws would readily conform to the change, and women would be respected instead of sneered at for being a little "strong-minded;" rather than compass sea and land to catch a husband, her first object will be

A SINGULAR instance of how the power of the press is coming to be appreciated, by that class which have hitherto affected to dispise it—those of spared no pains or expense to keep that royal blood—is seen in the fact that Queen Isabella, late of Spain, is now editing a newspaper in Paris. Her object, of course, is to push the claims of her son, the young Prince of the Asturius, to the throne of Spain, upon the extention of the Spainsh people. She attention of the Spanish people. She has selected the press as the most likely means of effecting her object.

It is again reported that Robert Bonner is negotiating for the purchase of the New York Herald.

Whisky versus Wine. After all, it is not certain but that the "coming man" will drink wine, notwithstanding that formidable article a few months back from Parton, in the Atlantic magazine. It seems to be a choice between drinking wine and whisky, and if he stays with us long enough to get acquainted, after he does come, it is thought he will not be an imbiber of the modern mixture known as fusil oil, tannic acld, prussic acid, winter green, &c., which is sold under about made up his mind that wine is to become the compromise drink between total abstinence on the one hand and irremediable drunkenness on the other. at least for the present. The superior value of American watches above all others is too well understood, in this country at least, to forward to marriage as a condition of need further illustration. Foreign watches being conceded on all bands to have been fairly beaten, not only in the market, but in the pocket, the question now is, which of the American made watches is best and really cheap st?

The Waltham manufacture has deservedly made its way to an immense business, in the face of viclent and persistent opposition. Through a period of tifteen years it has steadily and regularly advanced-the last year's sale having been considerably larger than those of any preceding year. The se cret of this is that the watches have stood the test of enduring and general trial; they are found to be good in the long run as well as the short, and to be sand watches, as this has done during the year just closed. The truth is, the Waltham Company began by resolving to make a first-class article, and they have continued to do so, and have fact before the public. For further in-

The reason temperance question in Europe, has of this is, that the reputation or the Waltham Watch renders it an easy sale, and the result is, that, although the dealer does not make as much money on each individual watch as he may on the sale of other watches, he is still the gainer through larger and livelier sales. There are some, however among the trade, who do not give the Waltham Watch the hearty support which it deserves. This portion of the trade fancy there is more money to be made by dealing in watches about which the public are ignorant, and in which there is less competition rant, and in which there is less competition, and are content to make an occasional sale of such watches at a large profit. It is this class of dealers who, when asked about Waltham Watches, use that kind of language which leads the customer to buy just such a watch as is the most profitable for the Mode of Preparation.—Buchu, in vacuo Juniper Berries, by distillation, to form a fine gin. Cubebs extracted by displacement by liquor obtained from Juniper Berries, containing very little sugar, a small proportion of spirit, and more palatable than any now in use. The active properties are by this mode extracted.

Buchu, as prepared by Druggists generally, is of a dark color. It is a plant that emits its fragrance; the action of flame destroys this (its active principle,) leaving a dark and glutinous decoction. Mine is the color of ingredients. The Buchu in my preparation predominates: the smallest quantity of the other ingredients are added, to prevent fermentation; upon inspection, it will be found not to be a Tincture, as made in Pharmacopoa, nor is it a Syrup—and therefore can be used in cases where fever or inflammation exists.
